

The FCC implementation of this rule presents problems for both consumers and business. As a consumer I cannot receive information by fax after a simple call to a business. As a business, I cannot supply information a potential customer may want until they have sent me written and signed authorization. The rule should be modified to be consistent with everyday modern life.